NO. OF PAGES

At 1900 hours on 10 June 1953, over 2,500 troops of the Chinese Communist 64 Army arrived in Mukden by train and left four hours later for North Korea on the same train. These troops were the first to arrive in Mukden of over 10,000 troops of the 64 Army being transferred to Korea from Chihnsien (N 41-07, E 121-07) and Hsinmin (N 41-59, E 122-48).¹

the arrival of the 64 Army in Liaosi province from North China in mid-October 1952. Other information, however, indicated that the 64 Army entered Korea in February 1951, and in July 1953 the 64 Army was still carried in Korea.
